

Presents:
Treating the Out of Control Adolescent and Child
With Dr. Scott Sells

Friday March 9, 2012
9:00 - 4:30
Bentley University
Waltham, Massachusetts

Traditional treatment models do a poor job of engaging difficult parents/caregivers of out-of-control teenagers because they don't address this problem: "Juveniles will return to future delinquent acts if their parents remain unchanged in the areas of consistent limit setting, rebuilding emotional attachments, and improved communication" (Williams and Chang, 2000, p. 159)

Parent involvement and engagement is the key to permanent changes in the adolescent, yet most traditional treatment is focused primarily on the individual youth.

Parenting with Love and Limits® (PLL) is recognized as an evidence-based model by these research organizations:

- NREPP: SAMHSA's National Registry of Evidence-based Programs and Practices
- OJJDP Model Programs Guide - Exemplary Rating
- Promising Practices Network on Children, Families and Communities
- Find Youth Info.gov
